

26th Annual
International Space Development Conference
InterContinental Hotel, Dallas, Texas
May 24-28, 2007

Sponsor and Exhibitor Prospectus

The Public Space Event of the Year

The National Space Society invites you to join the excitement in Dallas May 24-28 for what promises to be the biggest and best citizens' space conference of all time.

This conference marks the 26th anniversary of ISDC. Leaders from all segments of the space community will be on hand to share their inspiration for the future of space exploration and development.

Key Leaders

ISDC will bring together a diverse range of space leaders, from government to private enterprise, from scientist to artist.

We anticipate another year of strong support from top officials from NASA. NASA support for ISDC 2006 was led by Shana Dale, NASA's Deputy Administrator; and also included Charles Elachi, Director of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory; Pete Worden, Director of Ames; Brian Chase, Assistant Administrator for Legislative Affairs; Angela Diaz, Chief Education Officer; John Connolly, Lunar lander preproject manager; and Neil Woodward, Deputy Director, Constellation Systems.

We were also pleased to welcome Rick Homans, Secretary of Economic Development for the State of New Mexico; Patricia Grace Smith, Associate Administrator for Commercial Space Transportation FAA; and many other leaders from the commercial space sector.

Sponsorship Opportunities

ISDC 2006 was sponsored by NASA as well as leaders of the American space industry-visionary companies who recognized the value of the exposure, audience and network offered by ISDC.

For ISDC 2007, a wide variety of sponsorship levels are available, so every company can find a package that suits its goals and budget. We invite you to demonstrate your support and attention for space exploration and its benefits by joining in sponsorship of ISDC 2007.

Exhibitor Opportunities

ISDC 2007 provides an excellent opportunity for exhibitors. More than 1,000 attendees are expected, as well as national and local media coverage.

A variety of exhibitor options are available, ranging from large, full-scale exhibition spaces to areas suitable for smaller companies and businesses.

From Old Frontiers to New

The theme statement for ISDC 2007 is From Old Frontiers to New. Texas has become the eighth largest economy in the world and is helping to pioneer the new frontier of commercial and governmental space exploration. Our purpose is to engage the public, industry and decision-makers in an open discussion of why we pursue space exploration and development.

Return on Sponsorship Investment: Media and Publicity

Sponsors will receive wide exposure across a variety of media. As in 2005 and 2006, we expect leading national, industry, international and local media sources to attend the conference. In the past two years we have had coverage from national NBC Nightly News, the Discovery Channel, the BBC, the Economist, Wired Magazine, Popular Science, the Washington Post, the New York Times, Bloomberg, Business 2.0, National Public Radio, and Space News.

Last year, the announcement of the Lunar Lander Challenge from X Prize and NASA brought international attention to ISDC 2006.

A print advertising campaign in Space News will bring recognition in the aerospace community. Prominent placement on the conference website brings additional exposure. A series of articles and advertising on Space.com, SpaceNews.com and other online sources will be ongoing. Finally, blast emails to members and press releases will spread the word.

Return on Sponsorship Investment: Exposure and Networking

With strong participation from government entities and NASA, ISDC offers an important opportunity to build corporate profile before key decision-makers in the civil and commercial space sectors. We anticipate another year of strong support from top officials from NASA.

Return on Sponsorship Investment: Citizen Education and Action

Finally, ISDC offers the potential to share key messages with the citizens who provide a powerful voice in shaping government policy. Many of the people who attend ISDC are the most committed grassroots activists in the country. Sponsoring the conference shows that you are publicly engaged with space and enables your firm or organization to share key messages with these important activists.

Attractions and Programming

ISDC 2006 set a new standard for citizen space conferences with the largest turn out in recent history. ISDC 2007 will feature commercial space, the International Space Station, Moon and Mars, space entrepreneurship, the new Ares spaceship, and much more.

A wide variety of other space advocacy and educational organizations we anticipated as support for ISDC 2007, including the California Space Authority, National Society of Black Engineers, Caltech Venture Forum, Space Studies Institute, X Prize Foundation, Moon Society, Students for the Exploration and Development of Space, Spaceward Foundation, SEDS, SETI Institute, and more.

A list of top speakers from ISDC 2006 is listed in the following pages.

Gala

On Sunday, May 27th, ISDC will hold its Gala Awards Dinner at the Frontiers of Flight museum. The Gala will bring together leaders from the aerospace community. Last year, the top private aerospace entrepreneurs, Burt Rutan, Robert Bigelow, Will Whitehorn, and Elon Musk, mingled with the world's top space leaders. A taped key note speech from Sir Richard Branson was a highlight of the night.

Produced by the National Space Society

The National Space Society makes up the nation's largest block of advocates for space exploration and development, representing more than 20,000 supportive citizens.

NSS has a proven record of promoting space to the general public and communicating citizen support to top decision-makers in government, industry and the media. Learn more about The National Space Society at www.nss.org.
